Coincidences happen on a grid

Teacher Amanson

Amanson: Let us speak tonight on coincidence, those meetings in time that seem uncannily planned, because, for the most part, they are. “Planned by whom?” you ask. Ah, “There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy.” Now, young Hamlet said these words 400 years ago and they are still fresh, as if new minted today.

Coincidence, or as you tend to spell it ‘co-incidents’, happen on a grid. They are shuffled in the simplest yet complex fashion behind the scenes (‘beyond the veil’ to you). And life is structured on a need-to-know basis!

The truth is what appears as coincidence – a chance meeting; the appropriate word overheard; the confluence of stars; schedules that are somehow magically made to mesh – is the result of vibrational pull, and of necessity a way is cleared in the lives of the persons (i.e. frequencies) creating those vibrations.

When one is aligned with a purer vibration, a vibration bereft of fear, worry, the concerns that disrupt the connection to the central switchboard (I use a very human image), your calls can get through, so to speak; an even flow is established and happy co-incidents result. But when the wires get crossed, static invades the frequency and one’s vibration is altered, made irregular, volatile, anything but ‘free-flowing’.* Then, although ‘coincidence’ can happen, it is the result of a different program, an actual moment of chance, random, which is very low percentage in your world; far, far more meetings are the result of Truth in action, the Oneness displaying itself in mufti, unity in variety.

I hear your question about the statement “Every encounter is by divine appointment.” Yes, but is every encounter a “coincidence”? No. Here we are talking about those surprising examples of “What are the odds?!”; “How in the world…!”; “Who would have thought?!” There is much – and more! — that goes on behind the scenes than you could possibly know, but to turn yourself to this reckoning through Faith, through the quiet activity of aligning yourself with, if not a whole-hearted belief in such a phenomenon (let alone a knowledge) then at least to the possibility of it, is a step in the right direction. Let its actuality seep slowly at first into your mind through your imagination, then let that gradual acquaintance become the foundation for a genuine introduction into the higher vibrational world of the co-incident, a world where the divine escorts the human along the path of interior relationships, resulting in the peace of mind becoming a citizen of so high and clear a vision of the inner workings of the world. For truly, "There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy."

> * When I asked Amanson how these vibrations get so distorted, he said, “Man buries himself under his own angst”
