Consider the realm of your next life to be as a mirror

Teacher Elyon, Malvantra
T/R Jonathan, Daniel

Elyon: Oftentimes in the development of character an individual will not recognize an attained quality until the individual is able to label, to categorize, that quality, to transform it into a tangible perspective. As the character develops, it emerges in what appears to be a nebulous way, for the events of life are not linear when it comes to growth. Events must transpire, and when a subsequent event is needed, that may have to wait for years, and quite possibly it had occurred years prior to the primary, the first event, and it requires time for you to associate the secondary event, which in time occurred earlier, for the growth to be attained.

Once you have made the association and recognized it, then you take on bonafide possession of this status. You grant yourself qualification. You continually practice the development of morontia high-sight. Though you will be reminded continually that your world is largely physical and oftentimes distracted from the spiritual pursuit, let yourself believe fully that you are transforming your being into the status of a morontia being.

Consider the realm of your next life to be as a mirror, that as you grow now and look up into that mirror, it will reflect back to you your attainment. Just as you use a mirror in your daily life for grooming, to set yourself aright before you make your entrance into your daily affairs, use the morontia mirror for grooming, for that perspective of oneself that you may adjust your tie, that you may straighten your hair, that you may reflect the morontia into your daily life. Stillness is sitting before this mirror.

Malvantra: Yes, indeed, you should look into this mirror often to see how your morontia selves are appearing so that you may groom them for optimal performance. I would remind you at the same time that you as budding morontia individuals will also be using this mirror to mirror outwards to others what it means to live a morontia life of soul. Your individual lights will shine out, and the love of our Father and of Michael and of Mother and your teachers will reflect off your mirror so that others may see and be attracted to a life in partnership with our Father. The morontia mirror is a two-way mirror. If you will look at it closer yourselves you will discover that indeed it is a three-way mirror.

As was said previously, much of what you have truly become you do not yet see. Let go of your ego fear and allow yourself to see the beauty and truth of your own intentions and the reality of your personal spiritual growth. It is not egotistical to recognize that which your soul has accomplished. You have accomplished it with cooperation with your fragment of our Father. Your soul knows that this is so, that you have not accomplished it alone, all by yourself. It is because you have each come closer to your Thought Adjuster that you are beginning to become brilliant reflectors of our Father's life.
